Transition out involves communication

The move to kindergarten from Head Start can be daunting for children, but perhaps even more so for parents. They may wonder if their child is prepared and whether the transition out will be smooth. Parents agreed that Head Start prepares children well for the next stage of their education, but they also stressed the importance of communicating often and positively with children about what's happening next.

"She was well prepared. She was following directions and playing well. She didn't have any struggles," said Minerva Olivares of her daughter Merelin, who transitioned from Pugh Head Start to Pugh elementary.

Now Olivares' son Merlin will transition to Pugh elementary, and having gone through it with her daughter, Olivares has no worries about her son's transition out.

Claudia Rodriguez credits her son Alex's easy transition to kindergarten to Head Start for preparing him well and the open dialogue she and Alex had about the move. She anticipates her 3 year-old daughter Julietta's transition to Baytown's Head Start from the Early Head Start program will be just as easy. She said both she and her son talk often and positively to Julietta about the program.

"Communication is so important — we talk about what's going to happen, what class she'll be in and about having a new teacher," Rodriguez said. "She's excited."

Valencia Mason, who is preparing her niece Jannice for a move from Humble Center to the Road School, talks often to Jannice about having a new teacher, new friends and learning new things. She said volunteering at the school also helps children settle in, because they feel supported and understand school is important.

Head Start staff are also there to help with the transition out. Education and Special Services Manager Jamese Stancill had these tips for parents.

- Make sure you have registration documents.
- Share educational documents with the next school.
- Continue learning activities with your child at home. They should include reading, counting, arts and crafts and practice writing their name.

DIRECTOR'S CORNER

As we come to the close of the 2017-18 school year we look back at the huge impact that Hurricane Harvey had on us at the beginning of the year, and we celebrate because we made it through. There were many challenges for both staff and parents, many of whom were dealing with loss and still trying to rebuild. But we all managed to overcome our challenges and maintain a standard of excellence, and for that I applaud parents, teachers and children, because we did it together!

Having weathered Harvey, we also had three Federal Reviews. The Focus 2 Review in February looked at systems we have in place to ensure we provide quality services and maintain compliance. Though we haven't received a final report, the week went smoothly and we look forward to sharing a good report in the future. The Class Review, conducted in March, looked at teacher interaction with students. Our scores across the board were good, and we achieved the standard of excellence in Emotional Support. The CACFP review was conducted the week of May 8. This review looked at how our food program complies with USDA regulations.

In other news, we were excited to break ground on our new Baytown center and are hoping to occupy the building in 2019. It will bring the Early Head Start and Head Start programs under one roof.

Summer is almost upon us, and I hope you find time for family, friends, rest and renewal. While I always say this, it bears repeating, please, please read to your children daily during the summer.

SEE YOU IN AUGUST! — VENETIA L. PEACOCK

Charity puts books in hands of students

Virginia based Balint Charities came to the rescue after Hurricane Harvey by putting books into the hands of all the students at HCDE Head Start centers.

The charity, created five years ago by Kathleen Christesen in honor of her parents, provides new and almost new books and musical instruments to schools and early childhood centers across the country. With the help of Christesen's brother Steve Balint, the charity has made two deliveries of new books — 2,600 in total — to HCDE Head Start and plans on making more.

"We started this charity because there's a lot of information about the early intervention of reading and music for children and how it improves educational success," Christesen said.

Each book bears a sticker with "Barb's Books" in recognition of her mother Barbara, a retired librarian. Musical instruments come with "Fran's Bands" stickers, named for her father, Francis, who loves music.

"My parents are amazing," Christesen said. "They instilled the importance of education not only in their six children and their 17 grandchildren, but also in all children. They've made donations to universities, schools and organizations that support children and aid in a successful education."

For more information about the charity, visit www.balintcharities.org

Early childcare programs offer options

While parents of infants and toddlers have Early Head Start as a quality, affordable childcare option in Baytown, parents in other areas aren't so lucky. However, there are four private early childcare programs families can access through the Early Head Start Child Care Partnership Program (EHS-CPP).

Between John G. Jones Learning Center in Crosby, Fellowship of Purpose Early Childhood Learning Center in Channelview, Kool Kids Daycare in Pasadena and Let's Learn Christian Learning Center in Baytown, there are 60 Early Head Start places for children who qualify. Like Baytown EHS, which has 40 places, these centers serve children from six weeks to three years under the Head Start umbrella.

The two programs follow the same performance standards, offer parent engagement activities and have a low teacher-to-child ratio. The difference between the two is that EHS-CPP teachers are employed by the private centers, although they do have access to training and development through Head Start.

"We have collaborated with childcare centers to bring together the best of Early Head Start and childcare," said Jameese Stancill, Assistant Director of Childcare Partnerships.

As well as increasing the number of places for infants and toddlers of low income families in east Harris County, the private centers also support working families by providing a full-day, year-round program.

Meanwhile, Baytown EHS will soon merge with Baytown Head Start when the new facility, currently under construction, is completed. The combined program for children six weeks to five years will be the only one of its kind in the service area, but there are plans for others. Baytown EHS and EHS-CPP are accepting applications for the 2018-19 school year. For information, call 713-696-2150.

What makes a center unique?

Though they deliver a uniform program, each of the 15 HCDE Head Start centers are unique in their own way. Center Managers talked about what makes their center tick and what makes them unique for a new feature that shines a spotlight on the centers, starting with Tidwell and Sheffield.

For Tidwell, a freestanding center that houses 63 children in four classrooms, it's the small farm that backs up to the center.

"I think it definitely makes us unique," said Center Manager Mary Crather, who has been there since July 2015. "We have a farm behind us with two horses, roosters and chickens — it gives our children the opportunity to see farm animals and watch the horses."

Aside from the country setting, Crather, who has 22 years experience in early childcare, said they are all about fostering parent engagement and creating an open, positive and welcoming atmosphere. One way they do this is by celebrating parents who are first to bring in their child's monthly homework sheet by putting up a congratulatory poster in the hallway. Crather said it encourages other parents and boosts parent in-kind services.

With 135 children in seven classrooms in a purpose-built facility, Sheffield is one of the largest centers in the area. The center also works closely with Galena Park ISD's Early Head Start and STEP programs that serve children up to three years or have disabilities. Because most of Sheffield's students are native Spanish speakers, Center Manager Sherry Eagleton said they start out by teaching children in their first language as they settle in and then switch to English.

Eagleton, who also manages the 19-student San Jacinto center, strives to project a child-friendly, clean, organized and open environment where parents feel welcome.

"We're outside greeting parents every morning," Eagleton said.

Healthy food made yummy

Four year-old Leonardo Llamas from Dogan Head Start was this year's winner of the annual Parent/Child Food Science Fair with his dish of asparagus with chicken. Children and their parents had to choose a fruit or vegetable with which to create a healthy dish. Leonardo and his mom Nora Dela Cruz made asparagus appealing by pairing it with chicken.

Designed to educate families about nutrition, while promoting bonding and creativity, the food science fair is part of Head Start's overall goal to promote healthy eating in the centers and at home. The food science fair is held at each center, and the winner from each center progresses to the final judging at the Policy Council meeting.

School Messenger sign-up underway

Parents can expect more communication about emergencies and non emergencies alike via School Messenger this coming school year, but they must sign up first and as soon as possible. The notification system will be used for emergencies and to provide information about activities and events at centers, school closings and other happenings. Parents can sign up once they have completed a Commitment Appointment. They will then receive messages via text, email or phone.

ESQUINA DEL DIRECTOR

Al llegar al final del año escolar 2017-18, recordamos el enorme impacto que el huracán Harvey tuvo sobre nosotros a principios de año, y celebramos porque logramos completar el año. Hubo muchos desafíos tanto para el personal como para los padres, muchos de los cuales enfrentaron pérdidas y reconstrucción. Pero todos logramos superar nuestros desafíos y mantuvimos un estándar de excelencia, y por eso aplaudo a padres, maestros y niños, ¡porque lo hicimos juntos!

Desde entonces, hemos tenido tres Revisiones Federales. La revisión del 5 de febrero analizó los sistemas que tenemos implementados para garantizar que proporcionamos servicios de calidad y mantenemos el cumplimiento. Aunque no hemos recibido un informe final, la semana transcurrió sin problemas, y esperamos compartir un buen informe con usted. Recibimos el informe de la revisión CLASS del 5 de marzo, que analizó la interacción de los maestros con los estudiantes. Basado en el promedio nacional, funcionamos muy bien. También estamos esperando el informe sobre la revisión del 8 de mayo de CACFP, que analiza cómo nuestro programa de alimentos cumple con las regulaciones de USDA.

En otras noticias, estamos entusiasmados de comenzar a construir nuestro nuevo centro de Baytown y esperamos ocupar el edificio en 2019. Traerá los programas de Early Head Start y Head Start bajo un mismo techo.

El verano ya casi nos sobreviene, y espero que encuentren tiempo para la familia, los amigos, el descanso y la renovación. Y siempre digo esto, por favor lean a sus hijos diariamente este verano.

¡TE VEO EN AGOSTO — VENETIA L. PEACOCK

Caridades ponen libros en las manos de los estudiantes

Balint Charities, establecido en Virginia, vino al rescate después del huracán Harvey a poner libros en las manos de los estudiantes de los centros de Head Start de HCDE.

La organización benéfica, creada hace cinco años por Kathleen Christesen en honor a sus padres, ofrece libros e instrumentos musicales a escuelas y centros de la primera infancia en todo el país. Con la ayuda del hermano de Christesen, Steve Balint, la organización caritativa ha realizado dos entregas de libros (2,600 en total) a HCDE Head Start y planea hacer más.

"Comenzamos esta obra de caridad porque entendemos como la intervención temprana en la lectura y la música en los niños mejora el éxito educativo", dijo Christesen.

La transición implica comunicación

La transición al jardín de infantes de Head Start puede ser desalentadora para los niños, pero quizás aún más para los padres. Se preguntan si su hijo está preparado y si la transición ocurrirá sin problemas. Los padres estuvieron de acuerdo en que Head Start prepara bien a los niños para la próxima etapa de su educación, pero también enfatizaron la importancia de comunicarse a menudo y positivamente con los niños sobre lo que sucederá.

"La comunicación es muy importante: hablamos sobre lo que va a pasar, en qué clase estará y sobre su un nuevo maestro", dijo Claudia Rodríguez, acerca de la transición de su hija Julietta de 3 años al centro Head Start de Baytown del Programa Early Head Start.

Valencia Mason, que está preparando a su sobrina Jannice para mudarse de Humble Center a Road School, habla a menudo con Jannice sobre tener un nuevo maestro, nuevos amigos y aprender cosas nuevas.

La Gerente de Educación y Servicios Especiales Jameese Stancill tiene estos consejos para los padres para garantizar una transición fácil.

- Asegúrese de tener documentos de registro.
- Compartir documentos educativos con la próxima escuela
- Continuar aprendiendo actividades con su hijo en casa, incluyendo lectura, conteo, manualidades y arte, practicar escribiendo su nombre y dibujando.

Qué hace que un centro sea único?

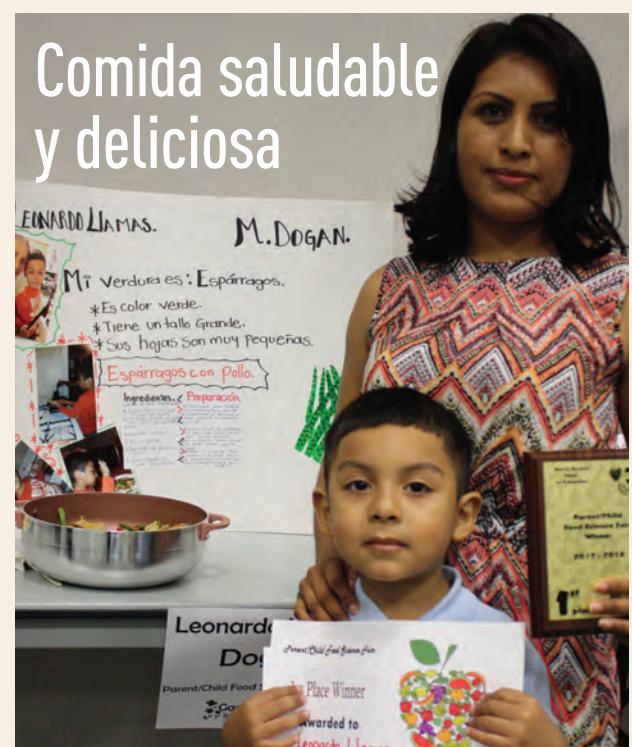

Los gerentes de los centros hablaron sobre como los centros se pueden destacar y tener algo único, comenzaron hablando de Tidwell y Sheffield.

Tidwell, un centro independiente que alberga a 63 niños en cuatro aulas, tiene una pequeña granja que rellena el entorno del centro. Con caballos, gallos y pollos, los niños tienen la oportunidad de ver animales de granja. Además, la gerente del centro, Mary Crather, dijo que en Tidwell celebra el compromiso de los padres premiando los primeros padres en traer la hoja de tarea mensual de sus hijos colocando un cartel de felicitación en el pasillo.

Con 135 niños en 7 aulas en una instalación especialmente diseñada, Sheffield es uno de los centros más grandes en el área. El centro también colabora estrechamente con los programas Early Head Start y STEP de Galena Park ISD que atienden a niños de hasta 3 años o niños con discapacidades. Debido a que la mayoría de los estudiantes de Sheffield son hablantes nativos de español, la Gerente del Centro, Sherry Eagleton, dijo que el centro enseña a los niños en su primer idioma mientras se establecen y luego cambian al inglés. Para obtener más información sobre los centros, visite <http://www.hcde-texas.org>.

Inscripción de School Messenger en curso

Los padres pueden esperar más comunicación acerca de emergencias y otros asuntos a través del School Messenger en el próximo año escolar, pero deben inscribirse primero y tan pronto como sea posible. El sistema de notificación se utilizará para emergencias y para proporcionar información sobre actividades y eventos en centros, cierres de escuelas y otros eventos. Los padres pueden inscribirse una vez que hayan completado una cita de compromiso. Luego recibirán mensajes por mensaje de texto, correo electrónico o teléfono.

Nora Dela Cruz and son Leonardo Llamas

Leonardo Llamas, 4 años, de Dogan Head Start fue el ganador de la Feria Anual de Ciencia de Alimentos para Padres e Hijos de este año con su plato de espárragos con pollo. Los niños y sus padres tuvieron que elegir una fruta o verdura con la que crearon un plato saludable. Leonardo y su madre, Nora Dela Cruz, hicieron que los espárragos fueran atractivos emparejándolo con pollo.

Diseñada para educar a las familias sobre la nutrición, mientras promueve el vínculo y la creatividad, la feria de ciencias de los alimentos es parte del objetivo general de Head Start de promover la alimentación saludable en los centros y en el hogar. La feria de ciencia de los alimentos se lleva a cabo en cada centro, y el ganador de cada centro pasa al jurado final en la reunión del Consejo Político.

Los programas de cuidado infantil ofrecen opciones

Baytown Early Head Start y los cuatro programas privados de cuidado infantil temprano que están en el Programa de Asociación de Cuidado Infantil de Early Head Start (EHS-CPP) están aceptando solicitudes para el año escolar 2018-19 de las familias que califican. Entre John G. Jones Learning Center en Crosby, Fellowship of Purpose en Channelview, Kool Kids Daycare en Pasadena y Let's Learn Christian Learning Center en Baytown, hay 60 lugares de Early Head Start, mientras que Baytown EHS tiene 40.

Los dos programas sirven a niños de 6 semanas a 3 años bajo el paraguas de Head Start. Tienen los mismos estándares de desempeño, ofrecen actividades de participación de padres y tienen una baja proporción de maestro/niño. La diferencia entre los dos programas es que los maestros de EHS-CPP son empleados por los centros privados, aunque tienen acceso a capacitación y desarrollo a través de Head Start.

Mientras tanto, Baytown EHS pronto se fusionará con Baytown Head Start cuando se complete la nueva instalación, actualmente en construcción. El programa combinado para niños de 6 semanas a 5 años será el único de su tipo en la región, pero hay planes para nuevos centros. Para obtener información sobre las aplicaciones, llame al 713-696-2150.
